Destruction by Fire of William and Mary

Marshill, 18 hundred and 50 nine.

College, Va. Intelligence reached this city that that bene-table institution of learning, William and Mary College, at Williamsburg, Va., was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Everything, including the valuable library, it is teported, is destroyed, involving a loss of $100,-000. The students all escaped safely. The property was insured for $22,000.

The College of William and Mary, the oldest, except Harvard University, in the United States, was chartered in 1693 by King William III and Queen Mary, who gave out of their private means nearly £2,000 towards erecting the necessary buildings. This with twenty thousand acres of land, the office of surveyor general (in virtue of which one-sixth of the fees received by public surveyors in the colony and the sole power of appointing them, were given) and one penny a pou don all tobacco exported from Virginia and Maryland, granted in the charter, £2,500 raised by subscription in the colony, and a gift of £290 from the House of Burgesses, constituted the endowment of the college.

Within the last few years large addition have been made to the philosophical apparatus both of which were amply sufficient for all the purposes of instruction in these sciences. The library had also been enlarged, and contained nearly 5,000 volumes, among which are many curious books .- States.

Small Pox.

It is not to be denied that this malady, or smething resembling it, is now upon us-yet it appears in the mildest form ever before known in the history of the disease. So mild, indeed, that some who have it would not be prevented from attending to their daily avocations, were it not for the danger of spreading it. We have always entertained a holy horror for this disease, yet when we see how readily it yields to medical treatment, and how lightly it affect those afflicted, we are induced to doubt its being small pox. But doctors pronounce it such, and we have no disposition to take issue with them. Admitting, then, that it is small pox, (and a great many of our sensible citizens loubt it very much) we have it in a form no more dreadful than ordinary measles-in fact, we have no proof that it is as dangerous as the

Whatever it may be, we can assure those who may have business at this place, that they need have no apprehensions in visiting the ciy, as every case is securely blockaded, and there is no possible chance for its spreading .-Our city authorities are entitled to public gratitute for their prompt and efficient action to guard against any intercourse on the part of the public with those afflicted. As yet, we have had only some eight or ten cases-all originating in the same house, which is now turned into a hospital, and securely guarded to prevent any communication whatever with the building. So careful, indeed, are the authorities, that a number of persons sound and well, are not permitted to come outside of the inclo-

These precautionary measures are taken as much for the benefit of visitors as for our own citizens-and we can assure the country people that they can come here and transact their business with the utmost safety. What we have stated may be relied on as correctand it is to be hoped that the people of the interior will pay no attention to the exaggerated reports that may always be found in circulation on such occasions. We have not heard of a single new case within the last six days, and those who have it, we understand, are rapidly recovering. In tess than a month every ves-

In the United States Senate, last week, Mr. Douglas presented a memorial of Henry O'Reilly, John J. Speed, jr., and Tal. P. Shaffner, proposing to complete a teleraph connection between the Atlantic and Pacific States by the commencement of the next session of Congress in December. The memorialists state that if the Senate pass the bill reported from the Committee on Territories at the last session, they pledge themselves that one line of telegraph to the Pacific shall be opened for the transmission of messages by the opening of
